EXPLORERS AND OVER THE HILL HIKERS

By Suzann Newell

November was very busy with hikes and 4x4 trips; the group drove into Grapevine Wash twice to hike to Cramp Springs and the two Indian Roasting Pits. A hike up to the third water fall is the hi-light of hiking to the Grapevine springs. Vern Farris led a group into the Slot Canyon where the last view is the drop off down to the Grapevine Springs.

The 4x4 group drove the Gregg's Hideout Road down to the bay and up Hell's Canyon to visit the old village up there and the next week we drove west from Highway 93 on Cottonwood Road then thru some fantastic canyons before we came to the Portland Wash Gold Mine. This open pit mine was a good gold producer until 15 years ago, now the road winds down 3 levels to a fairly good sized lake. The 15 miles on down to Bullhead City follows the river through an area that is covered with lava bombs. The lava rocks are volley ball size up to large wash tub size.

Our annual Christmas Potluck dinner had 22 members present and a lot of scrumptious food. We have set two hikes: Dec. 28 we will hike from South Cove Road to climb up the South Monolith. On January 8 we will park along South Cove Road and hike the cliffs that overlook Lake Mead. We call a cave in those cliffs the Apartment, it is a room with a view. On the 12th we will meet at Meadview Time to drive to Fire Mountain.

As MCA members you are invited to come join us. Our regular meetings are the second Wednesday of each month, 6:30 at the MCA auditorium.

COLORADO RIVER CRUISE AGAIN THRILLS BOATERS

From Meadview Monitor January/February 1968 by Hal Brown

STOPPING AT PIERCE FERRY, A FAVORITE SPOT FOR A COFFEE BREAK ON THE RIVER RUNS.

This season's final Granite Gorge Cruise, sponsored by the Meadview Adventurer's Club, was one of the most enjoyable outings the Club has sponsored to date, weather-wise, water wise and group size, 20 boats. Friday morning, November 24th, a beautiful balmy, Fall day, saw spirits high, with lots of gaiety, as we cast off from South Cove, heading for Iceberg Canyon and the Colorado River.

Jim Gale and I were the only ones that had any qualms. You see, on Nov. 22nd, two days prior to the actual cruise, Jim in his boat, with Bob Genung as his crew, and yours truly, in a 16 ft. craft, with Wilber Ast as my crew, took off up river to check the sand bars. Any of you boaters that have participated in a Colorado River Cruise, know that the river changes her course from time to time, due to the sand conditions.

The sight that greeted us as we passed Boundry Point and passed through the Narrows into Bradley Bay, was one of awe. On the South shore of the bay a reef protrudes out into the lake for quite a distance. Years past the Park Service Rangers had placed a reef marker to warn boaters of this danger. This day that marker stood well above the water level with tons of sand surrounding it. The level of Lake Mead at this time was a few feet above 1100 foot elevation and this accounted for the expanse of sand showing in Bradley Bay. For some reason the water flow in the Colorado was very low on this particular day and I have never, at any other time, seen so much river bottom in the form of sand.

We checked the river course from the Lake up river to Flour Sack Rapid, just above the Bat Mine, and the channel was well defined. There were two places where the depth of the water was a scant 3 feet. I should like to add at this time, that the river channel changes are caused by the silt banks sloughing off into the river current. One witnesses these sloughs while on any cruise up river. In many cases the silt banks are as high as 30 feet above the river and the wind and water play on these nearly perpendicular banks until they can no longer support themselves. It is some sight to see hundreds of feet of such a bank dropping tons of sand into the swift current, causing huge waves to form. This process is adding to the width of the river and at some points making it hard to find the negotiable channel. It's quite a surprise to find your boat in ankle deep water.

Meanwhile, back to the day of the actual cruise. It was a beautiful take off and as always, the sight of all the boats following, each creating its own wake, was a beautiful sight to see. This scene was soon interrupted however, when our lead boat started acting up and we slowed down to a crawl. I guess everyone wondered what on earth was taking place, it was certainly too soon for a coffee break. Before long our craft stopped completely and mechanical repairs were in order. A gas line restriction had caused the trouble. When this was corrected off we headed for the river, and to our complete surprise and relief, the river level was up a good four feet above the Nov. 22nd level and our group sailed right along.

There was much evidence of ducks and geese as this was nearing the time of the year for migration flights South.

After the Pierce Ferry coffee break we proceeded up river to enter the Lower Granite Gorge, a sight that will always thrill me, however often I make such a cruise.

As we caught sight of the steel towers high above, on the south canyon rim, that announces the bat Cave location, we noticed movement up ahead. As we came closer, we could make out canoes lashed together in twos and threes with small outboard motors pushing them along at slow speed. (The river current at this point runs between 4 and 5 miles per hour.) We all slowed down as we passed by. I might add this didn't help much. A loaded canoe has about 6 inches of freeboard and our boats, even at slow speed, kick up a whopping big wake. Well, we found out later that the canoe folks weren't waving at us, they were trying to slow us down even more.

We stopped on the north bank of the river on a narrow beach, below the Bat Cave, for lunch. While we were eating, the canoes caught up and beached a short distance up river for their lunch stop. As they passed, several of us made pleasant comments, only to receive cold stares. One group of these canoeists came in close and a member stood up to his full height and greeted us with, "you bunch of idiots, don't you know enough to slow down when you pass a canoe?" They weren't all unhappy, however, for later I had a very nice visit with their leader and laughs were in order. In fact, I'm going to join them on a down river run sometime in the near future. "I'll be in a rubber raft with a Mae West for company.)

Due to the rise in the river level we had very little trouble with sand bars until we reached Reference Point Rapid. At this point the river leaves the much narrower upper canyon and the water spreads out over a wide area at the base of a huge towering bluff. The river also makes a decided turn and the combination of wide river plus the turn usually causes some one to bar up here, and usually it's me, only this time I was in a smaller boat than on previous runs so sailed right on through. Not so, Wilber Ast, in his 18' cabin cruiser. He later swore there was no deep channel at that point because he had plowed sand from one bank to the other. I don't think that was very sporting of him because if he had come straight through in the heavy boat he could have made a channel for everybody. As I mentioned before, the river narrows above Reference Point and we could all relax and enjoy the changing colors of the high canyon walls from here to Bridge City.

Due to there being fewer boats than on previous trips it was possible to make a stop at Separation Canyon, as we did at the Bat Caves. Here we viewed the plaque placed there in memory of three of Powell's men. They had left this group at this point only to be killed by Indians after hiking out to the Shivwits Plateau, on the rim of the Canyon.

HAVING A GABFEST AROUND THE CAMPFIRE AT SPENCER CANYON, CAMPSITE FOR THE THANKSGIVING WEEKEND CRUISE UP THE COLORADO RIVER.

There was much swift water flowing over Separation Rapid and this created quite a problem, as the area large enough to land boats at is immediately above the rapid. As each boat landed, the crew turned to watch the next boat run the swift water. This was really a thrill to see as each boat seemed to pause as it entered the smooth water at the head of the rapid, actually where the water runs the swiftest. One boat, a fourteen footer owned by Jim Dyar, stalled out just as he was turning out of the swift water in preparation to landing. All of us watched helplessly as the fast current carried the Dyars boat back down through that rough water. A boat with an outboard successfully pulled them back up and just as they leveled off and hit the swiftest part, the rope broke and down they went, backwards through the rapid again. Talk about nervous people watching from the bank. Poor Jim disappeared down river trying to start his motor.

J.D. Truli and another pilot cast off in J.D.'s new Chrysler boat and soon came back upstream with the Dyars in tow. When we investigated, it was found that the fly wheel on Jim's boat had stripped the shaft key, hence no timing to fire.

Several boats continued up river to the first big rapid before returning downstream to Spencer Canyon, to the overnight campground. As always, lots of fun and levity was had around the campfire that night, before retiring. This camp area is in a ruggedly beautiful setting, the only noise one hears is the faint rustle of running water and an occasional bray of a wild burro. This can bring one to attention if he is close by.

Morning saw three boats high and dry. The water nearly always drops during the night and on this a.m. it was down nearly 3 feet. After a delicious breakfast camp was broken up and by 10 o'clock all were headed down stream

There were no major bar ups on the return run as our timing was just right. The boats were gaining on the runoff crest and this gave us more water as we proceeded down river.

While we were stopped at Pierce Ferry, several boats in the 18' to 24' class proceeded up stream. This flotilla was part of a southern California Power Squadron that were having a weekend campout at Sandy Point. Would like to know how far they got in those big boats.

The arrival at the South Cove launching ramp ended another wonderful two day adventurous outing; topped off by the Sportsman's Barbeque on the mesa overlooking Lake Mead.

To further top off this Thanksgiving weekend, a ranch breakfast was held on this same mesa on Sunday morning. Not to be outdone weather-wise, by the two previous days, the morning dawned another clear, beautiful, warm day. Imagine, sitting down to an outdoor breakfast in your shirt sleeves on November 26th.

On April 12, 1968, another Granite Gorge Cruise is planned, so if you have missed the previous trips plan to take this one in.

A FEW WORDS FROM SANDY -

Life's journey is soon taking me to new places of adventure. I want to thank the Board, my co-workers and all the wonderful MCA members who have enriched my life tremendously these past two years. Working here has been an absolute pleasure for me. I will miss you all, and I'll always have a place in my heart for each one of you.

Please stop by the office and introduce yourself to Shannon Fry. She'll be replacing my position in the office when I leave.

Welcome, Shannon!

VFW Activities January-February, 2018

Welcome to the VFW Post 11014, here in Meadview, AZ. Our mission is to serve Veterans and their families. We are so amazed and grateful to have such community support. Thank you. The Veterans Day flag-raising and activities were such a tremendous event, because of you. For all the Veterans who participated in the Veterans Photo Shoot, please stop by and pick up your copy of the Mohave Valley Daily News, Veterans Day insert. We are so proud to have shared 109 photos, of our community Veterans, in this issue. Thank you.

At the moment, January is seeming to give us an activity break before tackling the rest of the year. We will continue to hold the weekly activities –electronic darts on Monday, Taco Tuesday, burger Wednesday, Wii Bowling Thursday, Fish Friday, shuffleboard Saturday, pool tournament Sunday, and second Sunday Spaghetti Dinners. The third Saturday of each month is a Karaoke evening. All activities are open to the public to participate. All proceeds from dinners go directly to supporting Veteran Programs, in our community and beyond. Remember, we always have scholarship information for youth, and for Veterans wishing to continue their education.

In February, we will have a Valentine's themed Karaoke evening on the 17th. The next Boulder City, NV VA Home Bingo session will take place on February 21st. Volunteers are always welcome and appreciated. This is to assist the residents at the VA Home in several games of Bingo and add to the fun.

In March, the next Stand Down will take place. Stand Down is a community event centered around helping Homeless Veterans back on their feet. Donations of gently used clothing, new socks, sundries, sleeping mats, time, are greatly appreciated. The Stand Down event will take place in Bullhead City.

So many issues are coming before Congress on Veterans Health Care. If you would like to be an active voice to advocate for our Veterans, please stop in or visit VFW Action Corps Weekly online.

Wishing you a wonderful and blessed New Year,
VFW 11014 and Auxiliary
